

RACIAL INEQUALITY IN AMERICA

Racial inequality exists in America. The lives of Black Americans are severely limited in education, employment, health, and opportunity, compared to their White American counterparts. The stats on health, well-being, representation, employment, education, and wealth outlined below tell the story of a racially divided country.

Black Americans are twice as likely to not graduate High School.

Black American households are also more than twice as likely to be in poverty compared to White American households.
